

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE

The floating swimsuit is designed to help children enjoy being in water and learn to swim.

The child must enter the in water slowly.

This swimsuit does not protect against drowning.

The swimsuit must always be used under the constant supervision of a competent individual who can swim, and in water in which the user is able to stand. This is especially true the first times in the water because the Plouf swimsuit is most effective when the child is calm and breathing normally. The swimsuit should be adjusted as close to the child's body as possible: a swimsuit that is too big is completely ineffective.

To put the swimsuit without difficulty, we recommend that you first put on the legs, then insert the arms, and finally close the zip. To remove it, simply reverse the procedure described above.

The Plouf floating swimsuit has nothing in common with a simple buoy or inflatable armbands that hinder the child's movements. A certain amount of time is needed to get used to using it. As and when it is used, the user will come to control his/her movements and naturally find his/her balance.

Complies with European standard EN 13138-1: 2008.
